Bill Readings has left us a sobering diagnosis of the positions of researchers, teachers and administrators in what he calls the "post-historical" university. As his title suggests, he sees the contemporary university as a "ruined institution," arguing primarily against redemptive and nostalgic visions of the rebirth of citizenship or reason as central to the purpose of the

Review of Bill Readings' The University in Ruins

Bill Reading's Cormac-McCarthy-esque assessment of higher education, The University in Ruins, tries in vain to find that hundredth question. The domain of the university, ideally reserved for the kind of high-minded pondering that produces nuclear weapons and Nobel prizes, has become just another marketplace.
